A place to start making memories of our own . . .

Some of the happiest times I had as a little girl were spent in the kitchen with my mum and dad.

I often think back to those evenings. Mum was never much of a cook, but dad and I didn't mind – we just loved spending those evenings together.

Now my partner and I have a place of our own and it's time to start filling it up with memories of our time together. Luckily, mum and dad are just a phone call away, so we can keep sharing those moments with them.

So much more than just a place to eat . . .

Our kitchen is the heart of our home. It's about so much more than just meals. This is where we catch up with what everyone has been up to, it's where we entertain friends and, of course, it's where the homework is done.

That's why I treasure every single one of these moments. No matter how hectic or demanding life gets, we always try to find a moment together in the kitchen just to spend time as a family.

Everything is washed and cleared away, now I get some time to think . . .

I'm the kind of person who thrives on being busy, but with the day-to-day demands of clients and colleagues, it can be hard to find the time to step back and think about the bigger picture. After a long day, with dinner over and everything cleared away, this is my time. Time to plan out my week, work on my next pitch, and maybe even dare to dream about landing that big promotion.

A moment to ourselves means time to dance . . .

The kitchen has always been the busiest room in the house for us. When our children were growing up, we made so many precious memories but rarely had a moment to ourselves. Helping with homework and heartbreaks when they were young, and with careers and children of their own as they got older. They might be all grown up now, but our kitchen seems to be as busy as ever. Christmas and Easter, birthdays and holidays, our house is still where the whole family gets together. Everyone will be round for dinner soon and the usual chaos will descend, but for now we can take a moment to dance.
